

CONFERENCE ANNOUNCEMENTS<sup>1</sup>

SYMPOSIUM OF THE MANY WATERS Summer Symposium in Real Analysis XXIX

WHEN: June 21 – 25, 2005

WHERE: Walla Walla, WA

Walla Walla means “many waters” and the city, nestled at the juncture of the Columbia and Walla Walla rivers, is home to beautiful Whitman College. Whitman and the Real Analysis Exchange will host the Summer Symposium in Real Analysis XXIX. The nature of current work in real analysis is driven by the exchange of ideas generated by real analysts rooted in one subdiscipline of real analysis but with wide ranging interests. This Symposium will highlight lectures by both leading experts and energetic new researchers. This conference will be a vibrant forum for the discussion of research problems, and prime speaking time will be allotted to recent doctoral recipients. We have applied for partial participant support from the National Science Foundation; see our website for details and application materials.

In addition to three main hour-long lectures, several sessions of 20 minute communications are scheduled. For online preregistration visit:

<http://www.stolaf.edu/people/analysis>.

Individual questions concerning conference details may be addressed to the Conference Director, Russ Gordon at gordon@whitman.edu.

---

<sup>1</sup>See our website, <http://www.stolaf.edu/people/analysis>, for later announcements