

EDITORIAL MESSAGE

As we enter our second second decade of publication, it seems like an appropriate time to thank all of those who helped make the first ten years possible. First on this list must be the co-founders of the journal, Professors Michael Evans and Paul Humke. Next thanks go to the two supporting institutions: Western Illinois University who supplied seed money and continuing support throughout the first seven years of the journals existence and Michigan State University who has supplied continued support ever since the office moved here. We also are grateful to the associate editors who supplied encouragement at the beginning of our existence, guidance throughout those first few years of change and also provided much of the refereeing work in the early going. In addition we wish to thank all of those who have refereed papers for us in the past. There are too many to list here, but you know who you are and we are indebted to you for your assistance. Finally we wish to thank you, our readers. We were gratified by the large number of you who indicated your appreciation of our efforts by selecting the maximum end of our sliding subscription rate scale this year. Some even went beyond the maximum. Without your financial support we could not have continued to publish and without you there would be no reason to publish. We reconfirm our original commitment to keep subscription rates low and to publish all papers in the issue following acceptance.
