

EDITORIAL

EVANDRO AGAZZI

The present issue of Modern Logic is respectfully dedicated to Modern Logic's former associate editor and current advisory board member EVANDRO AGAZZI on the occasion of his sixtieth birthday, which we celebrate on 23rd October 1994.

Professor Agazzi was one of the original members of Modern Logic's editorial board, serving as an associate editor from 1990, beginning with the Pre-Publication Distribution Sample "issue" that appeared in January 1990, prior to the publication in June 1990 of volume 1, no. 1. He served as an associate editor through the end of 1993, concluding with volume 3, no. 4. On 1 January 1994 he became an ex officio member of our newly created advisory board in appreciation for his valuable service and his contributions to our discipline.

We are pleased to be able to open this issue with the article "Evandro Agazzi's Contributions to Logic" by his colleague and former student Michele Marsonet, and proud to honor him on this auspicious and joyous anniversary. I know that all of our current and former board members and all of our readers join me in wishing him "Many happy returns!" and in thanking him for his many contributions both to Modern Logic and especially to modern logic, its history and philosophy.

Irving H. Anellis

Editor